

Waiver of Wyern's Spur

Updated 6/28/2004, 3:06 PM

[1] I understand that this is a game of simulated combat; any act of actual violence or perceived actual violence will not be tolerated and will be reported to the authorities. And despite the signed waiver, any injuries caused by excessive force or malicious intent on my part will still be subject to existing civil codes.

[2] I understand that Amtgard organization are not sovereign states in the eyes of mundane law and will strive to obey all mundane laws during Amtgard gatherings and events.

[3] I will act in a manner that will not offend the general populace or hinder their access to public facilities. I will report any unsafe equipment or actions observed to a reeve or official.

[4] I agree that questions and comments from mundane populace should be treated with courtesy and respect. Those individuals seeking additional information showing signs of agitation should be directed to the local Amtgard leaders.

[5] I understand that we are all playing a game, which requires a common set of rules to allow everyone to participate effectively. I shall obtain and read a copy of the rulebook (through paying dues and owning one or by borrowing a copy from a friend) within one month of joining Amtgard.

[6] I will make an effort to count battle hits, which have occurred to me, and generally, count hit that an opponent says has occurred to me. I will not falsely state that I or someone on my team has achieved a hit upon an opponent. I agree to abide by the rulings of the reeves (field judges) and to remove myself from the field if asked.

[7] I will construct or obtain my own weapons and garb within a reasonable amount of time. I understand that after three (3) months of attendance I will only be able to play a peasant if I do not have at least a T-tunic, Tabard, or at least 50% of garb and all the required props of my chosen class.

[8] I choose to participate in these activities for fun and recreation. I will try to refrain from actions that will limit the other player's enjoyment. I understand that none of this has any meaning in the real (mundane) world other than meeting new friends and having fun. I will try to remember this when I feel angry and act accordingly.
